Sheryl Sandberg, No. 2 at Facebook, steps down
SAN FRANCISCO — Sheryl Sandberg, Facebook’s No. 2 executive, said Tuesday she is stepping down from the social media giant for a few months to serve on the company’s board. Sandberg, 51, said she is leaving Facebook “for a broad reason” amid a monthslong call on Facebook to scale back its footprint in the world’s most populous country.

“After much reflection and many conversations during the past few months, I have decided to take a broad reason to serve on the board,” Sandberg said in a statement.

The decision comes after Facebook faced its biggest crisis yet in China following the announcement that it would shut down its Chinese messaging app, WeChat, on Thursday. Facebook said the decision was made after a “year-long review of all our products和服务 in mainland China.”

Sandberg’s departure, which will take place at the end of this month, leaves a significant void at Facebook, which has been grappling with a number of challenges, including its growing reliance on China as well as ongoing regulatory and legal issues.

Sandberg was a key figure in Facebook’s expansion into China, where the social media giant has faced numerous challenges. In 2015, Facebook announced plans to launch a messaging app in China, which eventually became WeChat. However, Facebook struggled to gain traction in the market, and the app was eventually shut down in 2019.

In recent months, Facebook has faced increasing scrutiny over its role in China, particularly after revelations that its employees had access to WeChat data. The company has been forced to answer questions about its practices in the country, including how it exploits information from its users.

Sandberg’s departure also comes amid growing concerns about Facebook’s ability to remain profitable in the face of increasing regulatory pressures and competition from other social media giants.

Colombian drug lord dies in Miami prison

MANNHEIM — Gabriel Rodríguez Orejuela, one of the world's biggest drug traffickers and a former leader of Colombia's Medellín drug cartel, was found dead in his Miami prison cell on Thursday, adding fuel to a pandemic of coronavirus infections at federal facilities. Rodríguez Orejuela was serving a lengthy term for his role in smuggling hundreds of millions of dollars worth of cocaine. Rodríguez Orejuela's death comes two months after the United States cut him loose from a Miami prison under an agreement with Colombia's government to return him to face corruption charges. Rodríguez Orejuela was charged in a 2019 indictment for his role in the mid-1980s Medellín cartel. His younger brother is serving a prison term in the United States for heading the Medellín cartel.

Long in shadow, Charles takes on bigger role

By DANICA KIRKA

Prince Charles, meanwhile, has been ready to step in whenever required, most dramatically when he presided over the opening of Parliament and delivered the Queen’s Speech, laying out the government’s legislative program.

The event is symbolic of the somewhat ceremonial role as the UK’s head of state. The Queen has taken advantage of this role, which she views as meaningful, by holding the title of “Queen Consort” when Prince Charles becomes king.

For example, he began campaigning for environmental causes long before they were mainstream concerns. He has been accused of meddling in politics, something the monarchy is barred from, by speaking up about property developments he opposed and other issues.

As Britain’s longest-serving prince, Charles has been an independent thinker among the royal family, and he has not been afraid to speak his mind. He has been known as “Queen Consort” when Prince Charles becomes king.

Prince Charles and Camilla will surprise residents at a street party held to celebrate the Queen’s Platinum Jubilee.

For British royalty, there’s a Silver Jubilee (25 years), Ruby Jubilee (40 years), Golden Jubilee (50 years), Diamond Jubilee (60 years), Sapphire Jubilee (65 years) and Platinum Jubilee (70 years).

Thursday, June 2

10 a.m. — Trooping the Colour will begin early on Thursday, and members of the Royal Family will head to Buckingham Palace at 8:30 a.m. for the parade ground. “Trooping the Colour” will be broadcast on BBC One.

11 a.m. — The Queen’s Colour is expected to begin.

1 p.m. — The RAF flypast over Buckingham Palace is expected, and the Queen and other royals will watch from the palace balcony.

9:25 p.m. — The Royal Family will gather at Buckingham Palace to watch the Platinum Jubilee’s principal hous.

9:45 p.m. — Beacons across the UK, Isle of Man and the Channel Islands will then be lit to mark the Queen’s 70-year reign.

For British royalty, there’s a Silver Jubilee (25 years), Ruby Jubilee (40 years), Golden Jubilee (50 years), Diamond Jubilee (60 years), Sapphire Jubilee (65 years) and Platinum Jubilee (70 years).

Queen Elizabeth II, Britain’s longest-serving monarch, became queen at age 25 in 1952, and she has reigned for over 70 years. The Queen has been a symbol of stability as the country negotiated the end of empire, the birth of the computer age and the mass migration that transformed Britain into a multicultural society.

Yet through it all, the queen has built a bond with the nation through a seemingly endless stew of public appearances, ceremonial pageantry in central London.

And so the royal family’s jubilee season sets sail this week as 70 years of service, dedication and healing the wounds of the past come to an end.

The past two years have highlighted the monarch’s strengths as the queen alternately consolated a nation isolated by COVID-19 and debunked decades and names behalf the disease.

For example, he began campaigning for environmental causes long before they were mainstream concerns. He has been accused of meddling in politics, something the monarchy is barred from, by speaking up about property developments he opposed and other issues.
